

Austin, Texas – July 11, 2011 – Pangea Software celebrates the App Store’s third anniversary by giving everything away.

This week marks the third anniversary of Apple’s App Store, and to celebrate Pangea Software is making all of their iOS games free to anyone who wants them. No restrictions, no limitations, no catches. From 8am to 8pm CST on July 11th every Pangea game will be free, and after 8pm they will all go on sale for just 99 cents. The regular prices of Pangea’s iOS games are generally $3-4. This sale includes Enigmo, Enigmo 2, Enigmo Deluxe, Billy Frontier, Bugdom 2, Cro-Mag Rally, Antimatter, Warheads, Nanosaur 2, Otto Matic, and, Quarters. The games can all be found on the App Store at:

Pangea Software was one of the first game companies to experience great success developing iPhone apps with over $7 million in sales since 2008. “iOS and the App Store are the most important things to come along in the video game industry in a generation,” said Brian Greenstone, President of Pangea Software, “We’ve been very fortunate to have been a part of this, so to say ‘Thank You’ to all of our awesome customers we’re hosting the biggest giveaway the App Store has ever seen.”

Pangea also notes that they are working on major updates to many of their games for iOS 5 due to be released later this fall. No details are available yet, but the updates are said to be significant, especially regarding their two multiplayer networked games Nanosaur 2 and Cro-Mag Rally.
